

IN THE BEGINNING...

Frances Sheldon Bolton-1

Frances Sheldon Bolton was born in New Haven, Conn., on September 22, 1863, the daughter of Judge Joseph Sheldon and Abigail Burrill Barker. A part of her early life was spent in England and Switzerland, and later in Syracuse, N.Y. At the age of twenty she married James Bolton and enjoyed a happy married life for over fifty years. Their first child, Clarence Havelock Bolton, was born seven years after their marriage, and two years later a second son was born, Joseph Sheldon Gerry Bolton. A few years later a daughter Dorothea, brightened their lives. Several years later another daughter, Frances, was born while her mother was president of the Connecticut Congress of Mothers.

From her parents Mrs. Bolton inherited a high idealism, a firm conviction of the necessity of social justice, and a wide sympathy for the unfortunate. Her parents were leaders in woman suffrage, anti-slavery, prison reform and temperance. Judge Sheldon was the author of a bill in the Connecticut State Legislature, which gave equal guardianship rights to mothers and fathers.

As her parents had spent their lives in helping adults. Mrs. Bolton tried to help children, so that the adults of the next generation might escape much of their usual misfortune. From her grandmother she inherited the capacity for boundless love, which with the idealism of her parents, combined to give her an outstanding character. She had tireless energy and spared no pains to realize her high ideals in practical ways. Her personal enthusiasm and courage, as well as social position, were factors in her accomplishments. She was an outstanding figure in the State of Connecticut.

Having trained as a nurse, Mrs. Bolton was naturally interested in child welfare. In speaking of these early years, her daughters write, "To care for her first baby in the finest way possible, Mrs. Bolton sought books on bringing up children. Finding none, she determined to write them herself. In 1894, when only thirty years old, she edited a monthly magazine, THE MOTHERS JOURNAL. Every month for ten years, she composed a number of articles and one special feature signed Materna. Her subjects ranged from Baby's Father, Baby's Bath, through Baby's Food, etc. She wrote with a studied simplicity so that she might appeal to young mothers. Baby's needs could be remembered by the 4 S's: Plenty of Soap, Soup, Sunshine and Smiles.

In 1898, Mrs. Bolton published one of the first books on child care, entitled: BABY. She had first thought of this subject when she was a trained nurse at Pittsfield Maternity Hospital, Massachusetts, in 1883. There she had charge of newborn babies and believed there was nothing more important than giving them a sense of security and love from birth.

With her own beliefs already firmly set in the path of child welfare, Mrs. Bolton welcomed the news that a National Congress of Mothers was to be formed in Washington, D.C., February 17, 1897. She printed the call to the meeting in her Mothers Journal and was Connecticut's sole representative at the meeting. Mrs. Bolton was appointed "organizer" for the Connecticut Congress of Mothers by Mrs. Alice McClellan Birney, first national President,

For three years she attended the National Conventions, each year being urged by Mrs. Birney to found a Connecticut Branch. In 1900 she consented to put the matter to a test.

She wrote three hundred and fifty letters by hand, and mailed them to persons all over the state selecting ministers and their wives, teachers, members of Boards of Education, and others whom she hoped would be interested in the idea. She later said of that first memorable gathering:

"It was the fashion in those days to serve elaborate refreshments at every kind of gathering, and my one fear was that I might not have enough to eat. So, assuming that I might reasonably expect two-thirds of my invited guests to accept, I prepared for two hundred and fifty people. Such mountains of food we prepared! Two wash boilers full of sandwiches, salad in every bowl and receptacle in the house, half a dozen kinds of cakes, gallons of ice cream, and more gallons of coffee. Finally, it was all ready and - ten people came." The Bolton families have always declared they lived on sandwiches until spring."

Mrs. Bolton was somewhat discouraged but, as it was an usually stormy day, there was some consolation. She determined to carry on.

"It may be a unique thing," writes Frances Bolton, the Founder's daughter, "that the Connecticut Congress was formed by a group of mothers who were unusually young at the time - in their twenties or thirties. The young mothers in the group of Charter members were active workers. It was a remarkable thing about the Connecticut Congress that it started from so few at the beginning and from such young mothers. But the really important thing about the Congress was the height of its ideals and the breadth of vision its Founder."

To Mrs. Bolton alone belongs the credit of its beginning and safe guidance through these uncertain and precarious years. Unlike Mrs. Birney, she had no wealth and powerful prestige to aid her; she undertook it single-handed. The fact that from its inception, the idea has grown and flourished is due to her untiring energy and prophetic vision.

In 1907, Mrs. Bolton was made Honorary President. Convention resolutions were passed "in hearty and loving appreciation of the earnest, unselfish and devoted labors of its first and beloved president."

Mrs. Bolton continued her interest in organization work and remained an outstanding figure in works of philanthropy all of her life. The New Haven Union, in its publication of January 16, 1910, gives a glowing account of a reception given for Mrs. Bolton in recognition of her civic activities. During the previous summer, when all the other members of the Consumers League and Mothers Clubs were away, in Europe, at the shore, in the mountains, she had remained and opened up Pure Milk Stations to provide for poor, helpless babies. Tribute was paid to Mrs. Bolton's inventive genius, as some of the appliances she had invented to preserve milk, and to handle the bottles more systematically, had been copied in Boston.

Mrs. Bolton died after a short illness August 30, 1936, her energy still undaunted, still active in the work of many organizations, particularly that of the Connecticut Congress of Parents and Teachers. She is buried in Syracuse, N.Y., where her grave is marked by the first bronze replica of the Congress Emblem.

February 17-19, 1897

Frances Sheldon Bolton traveled to Washington, D.C. to attend the first meeting of the National Congress of Mothers. 200 were expected, 2,000 attended! Founders Alice McLellan Birney and Phoebe Apperson Hearst elected president and first vice president respectively. Another vice president was Mrs. Adlai E. Stevenson, wife of U.S. vice president. Mrs. Grover Cleveland gave a reception at the White House.

Mrs. Hearst commissioned Mrs. Bolton to found a Congress of Mothers in Connecticut.

December 5, 1900

Original Meeting

Membership: 10

President: Frances Sheldon Bolton, New Haven - 1st Connecticut PTA President

Highlights: The "Reach for the Stars!" Reflections Awards Banquet kicked off the convention with 300+ students, family members and PTA members in attendance. Sixty-three student winners were awarded ribbons and certificates for their winning entries. Jion Kim from Spring Glen School PTA, Hamden, CT was also a National PTA Award Recipient. Keynote Speaker: Anthony Wolf, child psychologist and author of numerous child-raising books was the luncheon speaker. Dr. Wolf shared his ideas and advice on raising children, receiving many laughs as everyone "identified" with each situation. CT PTA was pleased to have two special sponsors, IDEAS: Inventive Designs for Education & The Arts, Dr. Sue Snyder and Allison Abucewicz, and Genevieve's Fundraising, Dan McLaughlin. Friday morning brought numerous workshop choices and General Session I, highlighted by the Presentation of Colors by the Wilby High School ROTC, the Pledge of Allegiance by students from the Elizabeth Ives School and the National Anthem, sung by Kristen Klemeshefsky, John F. Kennedy High School, Waterbury. Friday evening the "Spirit of PTA" Gala was held to recognize those volunteers who in their communities promote and encourage the essence of PTA... "every child. one voice." Keith Alan Productions "got the party started" with dance music and fun and games for all! On Saturday, more workshops and General Session II kept everyone busy. Installation of Region Directors and the presentation of Membership Awards were completed with the help of Shirley Igo, National PTA President. Congressman Jim Maloney was a surprise guest as the convention culminated with a working brunch.

Convention Location: Clarion Hotel, Bristol

NPTA Rep: Anna Weselak

Legislation/Resolutions: The ECS allotment for each town or district should be calculated using the most current tax, assessment and census data. Education funding from the state to the towns should begin with a realistic minimum threshold amount for all students in all districts. Talented and gifted programs and before and after school programs should receive support from the state in the form of funding. The special education excess cost reimbursement threshold should be lowered

2007 - 2008

.940 members 265 units

President: Melissa Johnson - 46th Connecticut PTA President

Convention Theme: "Healthy Kids Inside and Out"

Convention Location: Crowne Plaze Hotel, Cromwell

NPTA Rep: Anna Weselak

Legislation/Resolutions: Education funding from the state to the towns must begin with a realistic minimum threshold amount for all students in all districts and allocate additional funds according to level of need where such funds are necessary to bring the achievement levels of children in a jurisdiction to state standard. Additionally the state must not divert money from existing funding to pay for new programs or priorities. CT PTA encourages the legislature to adopt statewide legislation allowing for municipalities to create nonpartisan Boards of Education. Successful and effective parent engagement requires parental involvement at every step of the education process. It is critical that parents be involved in education reform from the earliest planning stages. Any legislation that requires the formation of a group to take action on an education issue must mandate a parent representative as a required member of that group. The special education excess cost reimbursement threshold should be lowered.

2008 - 2009

President: Marne Usher, North Haven - 47th Connecticut PTA President

Convention Theme: "Not your Mothers PTA! Or is it?"

Convention Location: Trumbull Marriott, Trumbull

NPTA Rep: Derrick W. Byrd

Legislation/Resolutions: CT PTA encourages the legislature to adopt statewide legislation allowing for municipalities to create nonpartisan Boards of Education. The ECS formula that governs current state education spending needs to be reevaluated and recreated to meet the needs of a 21st century Connecticut. Connecticut PTA urges the State Department of Education to support strong parent involvement professional development for all teachers and other certified personnel and further urges; The State Legislature to require the Higher Education Commission to include parent involvement course(s) in their education certification programs for teachers, administrators and superintendents. CT PTA supports legislation that would require the State Department of Education to make available financial information regarding school funding and allocation of state resources in a more transparent and timely manner.
